

Abstract

A method and system for displaying server-side components in a visual development environment. Upon a triggering event, code is requested from a server. The code represents a user interface for a server-side object. The code is then processed to deactivate interactive elements. Further processing may occur to fix references to images. Then, a graphical representation of the server-side object is displayed in the visual development environment.

23552

PATENT TRADEMARK OFFICE